"Finishing the Story"

Speaker: Jennifer Holik

Tracing the life of a World War I or II soldier can be challenging. Many researchers are unaware of the many records and resources available outside of the usual genealogical record sources. Explore the lives, service, and deaths of three soldiers, through the usual genealogical records and learn about numerous military resources available. Through a brief reading from her new book Stories of the Lost, Jennifer will demonstrate how to write the stories of your soldier.

Jennifer Holik is a Chicago-based genealogical and military researcher, speaker, and author. Her passion is researching and writing the stories of men and women who served in World War II. She is the author of several books including Stories of the Lost: Discovering the Story of Our Heroes through Genealogy, and a series of genealogy teaching books entitled, Branching Out. Jennifer is part of the staff of the World War II History Network. She volunteers as the Genealogy Department Manager at Casa Italia in Stone Park. She also volunteers in the Italian American Veterans Museum. Learn more: <http://jenniferholik.com>
